

HARRY DICKENSON

SUMMARY

I am currently studying a one-year Master's Degree in Marketing at the University of Exeter, with the aim of building a career in international business. My academic background, combined with work and voluntary experience, has taught me the value of being proactive, adaptable, and well-organised. Having moved between countries and schools throughout my education, I've learned how to adjust to new cultures and form strong relationships quickly. These international experiences sparked my interest in global business—particularly in the branding of consumer goods, where I observed how successful brands balance local cultural adaptation with a consistent brand identity.
